Let's Start!

That's it ... I quit!

QUIT JOB?

NO

YES

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Why do you think people quit a job?
- Have you ever considered quitting a job? Why? Why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can express emotions and feelings.
- I can talk about results in time.
- I can explain my ideas and opinions with precision.

Let's Explore!

Adam is feeling discouraged at work. He's thinking of resigning!

* To "resign" means to leave your job. To "quit" is an informal way of saying the same thing.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Kristi: So tell me, why did you want to meet? I get the feeling something is up.
- Adam: Yes. I'm sorry to have kept you in suspense, but I want you to know that things aren't going so well for me here at BFP.
- Kristi: What? Everyone loves you here!
- Adam: I don't feel that I'm being given much recognition. In fact, I'm thinking of resigning.
- Kristi: Working here is an amazing opportunity. Give it more time.
- Adam: I thought so too, but then having done an online test for people about job satisfaction, I realized there were a lot of red flags working here.
- Kristi: What were the questions?
- Adam: They were things like: Do you sometimes wake up early, excited about an idea you have? Does your work allow you to hold true to your personal values?
- Kristi: I don't see how your work as editorial assistant goes against your personal values.
- Adam: I value being creative at work. Right now, I am doing a lot of proofreading, but no original writing. From what I see, my potential for career growth is limited.
- Kristi: No job is perfect. Having met so many great colleagues here, I know we are treated with respect.
- Adam: But how will I know if I am good enough to be a real journalist, if I am stuck in a dead-end job?
- Kristi: Of course you are good enough! We have to play the game. Having been here only a few months, it's too early for us to make a decision like that. We have to prove what we're worth. Gradually, the bosses will give us more responsibility.
- Adam: There seems to have been some movement recently in the company.
- Kristi: Yes, I noticed that.
- Adam: Remember Amanda?
- Kristi: No, not really. I don't remember having met her before.
- Adam: Well, she was let go last week. She was felt not to have met the standards required.
- Kristi: At least you should go talk to Ms. Moore before you make a rash decision.
- Adam: OK, I will.

Let's Practice!

Beth talks about results in time.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write the correct form of the word in parenthesis. Practice saying the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. Having _____ (do) an online test for people about job satisfaction, I realized there were a lot of red flags working here.
2. Having _____ (work) with many great colleagues here, I know we are treated with respect.
3. Having _____ (be) here only a few months, it's too early for us to make a decision like that.
4. I don't remember having _____ (meet) her before.

Let's Practice!

Let's play tic-tac-toe!

Instructions: Choose a square. Say a sentence with the word in it. If the sentence is correct you win the square. Write either (X) or (O). Complete a row of 3 squares horizontally, vertically or diagonally to win. Play with a partner.

dead-end job	personal values	career growth
play the game	rash decision	red flag
resigning	standards	recognition

Extension Activity

Write a dialogue giving advice to a person who wants to quit their job.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a partner, discuss the factors of job satisfaction that were mentioned in this lesson.
- Think of other factors influencing job satisfaction.
- Write a dialogue of 8 - 12 lines. One person wants to quit their job. They explain why. The other person gives reasons for them to stay.
- Practice your dialogue with a partner.
- Change roles and practice the dialogue again.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I discuss things that influence job satisfaction.

I give reasons for being unhappy at work.

I give reasons to stay at a job.

Target Words

- rash (adjective): quick, without thinking
e.g. At least you should go talk to Ms. Moore about it before you make a rash decision.
- job satisfaction (noun): measurement of how much you enjoy your work e.g. Having done an online test for people about job satisfaction, I realized a lot of things.
- career growth (noun): advancing in a career field by getting positions with increasing responsibility e.g. From what I see, my potential for career growth is limited.
- red flag (expression): a clue there may be some problems you haven't seen yet e.g. There were a lot of red flags working here.
- dead-end job (noun): a job that has no chance for growth potential e.g. How will I know if I am good enough to be a real journalist, if I am stuck in a dead-end job?
- recognition (noun): feeling you are valued and given credit for your good work e.g. I don't feel that I'm being given much recognition.
- you have to play the game (expression): it is necessary to obey rules, meet expectations and follow conventions in a social context (such as the workplace)
e.g. Having been here only a few months, it's too early for us to make a decision like that. We have to play the game.

Learning Points

The Perfect Infinitive

The Perfect tenses can be used to talk about how something in the past relates to the present.

Look at the chart for an outline of the structure and the uses of the Perfect infinitive.

Use	Example	Structure
Use (seem and appear) after linking verbs to refer to a previous time period.	There seems to have been a mistake in the report. The matter appears to have been resolved.	verb + to have + past participle
After phrases that express emotions or feelings	I'm sorry to have kept the news from you. She was felt to have met the necessary requirements for the position.	verb + to have + past participle

Examples:

- I'm sorry to have kept you in suspense, but I want you to know that things aren't going so well for me here at BFP.
- There seems to have been some movement recently in the company.
- She was felt not to have met the standards required.

Learning Points

Using -ing Forms

You use a Perfect -ing form to emphasize a specific thing that happens before another when talking about results and time.

For example:

I didn't remember having met them on that occasion.

Here, "having met them" comes first, "remembering" comes next.

Having finished the prep work, she started writing.

Here, "writing" comes first, "finishing the prep work" comes next.

You can use the -ing form as a noun, as an adjective or as a verb.

For example:

Smoking is dangerous. (noun) He spends his summers at a baseball training camp.

(adjective) I don't like skiing. (verb)

When you use -ing as a noun, you may or may not put an article before it.

For example:

Editing takes a great deal of concentration. The editing of the novel will continue for a few weeks yet.

You can also use it as a noun phrase.

For example:

Giving a speech is somewhat daunting. Riding my bicycle to work is invigorating.

You can use the -ing form before a noun when it is an adjective.

For example:

He was met by a welcoming party of fans at the stadium. Let's go to the dressing room.

You use the -ing form after prepositions.

For example:

Before coming, you need to speak to Tanya. After discussing it with her, I've changed my mind. I'm looking forward to seeing her again.

Examples:

- Having met so many great colleagues here, I know we are treated with respect.
- Having been here only a few months, it's too early for us to make a decision like that.
- I don't remember having met her before.
